To Whom It May Concern,

Letter of Recommendation for Christian Dohrmann

I have known Mr. Dohrmann for almost a year during his time in the Social Integration Section of the Social Development Division at United Nations Economic and Social Commission for Asia and the Pacific. As a consultant, Mr. Dohrmann contributed to several of the Section's projects on youth.

As part of the youth team, Mr. Dohrmann worked in a very systematic and structured way with strong determination to deliver high-quality outputs. As part of a youth-centred campaign on urban sustainability he worked closely with representatives from civil society, a local government and other United Nations agencies to identify common ground among stakeholders in a very coherent and satisfying way to ensure that most individual interests were met.

Mr. Dohrmann also proved himself to be a well-rounded research assistant and contributed to papers and publications on, among several, the importance of and means to better integrate young people in political, employment and civic life. Working with both quantitatively and qualitatively information he analyzed data and responses from surveys and focused group discussions that later fed into a publication.

Mr. Dohrmann also demonstrated great skills and knowledge on web design in supporting the first conceptualization of a youth policy website for policymakers. He also created a video to commemorate the International Youth Day 2015.

Mr. Dohrmann is a hard-working, reliable and pleasant colleague to work with. In combination with his creative, analytical and structured thinking I am convinced that his skills will be an asset to a broad range of organizations.

With best regards,

Yours sincerely,
